Since its opening on Feb. 26, the art gallery in the library building is no longer just a blank canvas, but instead a showcase of architectural designs from GCC students.

It has been months in the making for the students involved in the gallery, and their work is finally on display in the "3rd Annual Student Projects Exhibition."

"It feels great for us students as well because you get to see what people think of your work," said 21-year-old art student Nareg Ghazarian. "People actually see your work. It's not just you when you go home and put it somewhere."

Student artist Sevan Barseghian, 21, said that the gallery exceeded his expectations. "The depth of the work is amazing," said Barseghian. "We couldn't have imagined this, maybe even a year ago." Barseghian and Ghazarian had been working on their pieces during the fall and winter semesters.

Barseghian believes that students should be able to express themselves freely with more art around campus. Ghazarian also thinks that having events like the art gallery will inspire students that are undecided majors and show them what the school has to offer. Regarding the art presence on campus, Ghazarian believes they are "moving in the right direction."

The two explained that sitting in a room for hours at a
