Kevin Mack is an Instructor of History at GCC. Kevin says "studying abroad changed my life". As a college student he spent a semester studying in Rome, immersing himself in Italian food, culture, and history. He returned home with a transformed outlook on the world and on himself, along with a new major (History). Besides Italy, his travels took him to Croatia, the Czech Republic, Egypt, France, Spain, and Tunisia. In each location, he took the greatest pleasure connecting that place with historical developments he had studied. We'll be doing much of the same in the HIST 101 course in Spain. History 101 covers foundational developments in the construction of Western European identity and culture: Hellenism and the Roman Empire, the Medieval Church and Renaissance, and the Reformation and rise of nation-states. In Spain, we will analyze these events with a special Iberian focus, immersing ourselves in these histories where they happened. 3 units transfer credit UC, CSU, USC

Julie Gamberg teaches English and Humanities at Glendale College. Julie loves working with students and loves to travel. Julie benefitted from Study Abroad as a college student, which she found to be a safe and supportive way to experience travel and to learn so much about the world. Afterward, she spent 8 months traveling on her own in Tibet, Nepal, India, China, and Thailand. Julie continued her travels to Cuba, Europe, South America, Africa, Micronesia, along the way falling in love with and understanding the world as only someone who has explored it can. For summer 2019 in Spain Julie is excited to be teaching Humanities 117. This class always has its focus on the arts and other areas of college study. So in Spain, we will look at connections between the arts and European history. How did the arts influence, and how were they influenced by, history? We will also look at what's happening in the contemporary fields of dance, music, film, drama, architecture and literature in Madrid and environs. 3 units transfer credit UC, CSU, USC

Lourdes Girardi has been an instructor and director in Study Abroad programs to Spain, France, México and within the United States. Lourdes was born in Cuba and grew up in Puerto Rico, but her family still lives in Spain, which remains that "special place". Studying abroad is a life changing experience, and Prof. Girardi would like very much to introduce you to a country very close to her heart. Come join her in this unique experience. Prof. Girardi will teach Spanish 48 – Spanish Field Studies. This course guides students in their exploration of Spanish language and culture while in Spain- a country full of life, culture and history! Students will observe, document and assess significant differences between Spain and the United States. Prof. Girardi will share her insights into Spanish language, traditions, and culture, and encourage students to discover the real España! 1 unit transfer credit CSU
